BACK TO THE BALLGAME

The original schedule drew up June 27th as a rest week from the league, but instead, Warriors have found themselves without a competitive match for three weeks, which makes today's meeting with the Enfield Spartans a kind of long distance double-header. Meanwhile Enfield have been keeping in shape with important victories over Essex, Birmingham and Cambridge, and will no doubt be keen to avenge the 4-3 reversal of June 20th.

WP Cody Cain (4-0)

LP Rob Nelson (?-?)

By all accounts a classic showdown between the two play-off finalists of the last two seasons. Very few runs scored off the controlled pitching of both teams, and what hits there were, were well monitored by both sets of fielders, yielding something in the order of two errors for the whole match.

Warriors started brightly, Cody Cain with 1 RBI, and Brad Thompson with 2, to provide a vital cushion. Enfield rallied in the bottom of the second, and only a throw out of leftfield from Thompson, relayed by Harry Atwood at short, to home plate, prevented Spartans from taking the lead.

The bottom of the third was closed by a double play, Atwood relaying to Darrin Ward at first, and London dealt another blow in the top of the fourth, Alan Smith hitting a double, then going on to score, to put Warriors ahead again.

Enfield showed their fielding prowess in the top of the fifth, cutting short the Warrior threat with a double play of their own. The bottom of the fifth saw Cody Cain make two of the outs by catching line drives, one from his third base slot, and the second on the mound from his second delivery as relief pitcher.

Another double play in the top of the seventh seemed to finish London's chances, only for them to be revived by a Darrin Ward triple. Sadly, however, Darrin was left on base at the close.

The bottom of the eighth was nailbiting for both sides. Enfield loaded up the bases without loss, and things looked grim for Cody Cain, but a heads up double play, home and first, followed by a fly ball caught by Harry Atwood, kept Spartans off the scoreboard, and probably saved the game for Warriors.

The Enfield battery of Rob Nelson and Gary Bedingfield had a superb game, as did the combined force of Vincente Martinez, Cody Cain and Alan Bloomfield for London. For those great plays not included in the above, an apology. With so many good things happening in one game, it was very hard to choose the best.

Sunday 11th July 1993

	1	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	R
Cambridge Knights	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	1	0	0	2	LP Sergio Espinosa
Enfield Spartans	1	4	1	4	0	0	0	1	1	0	X	1	WP Rob Nelson

A horrible start to the day for Knights Sergio Espinosa. His first eight deliveries were all balls, and two of the first four Enfield runs were bases loaded walks.

Espinosa tried valliantly to find his rhythm, but when he loaded the bases with none out in the third, it was too much, and Steve Gilbert was brought in to releive.

RBI's then followed for Julien Fountain, Oscar Marcellino (sac fly), Ian Lanario and Brad Cruickshank, before Gilbert settled into a tighter groove that allowed just one more run from the Spartans.

In the sixth, a well placed squeeze bunt from Steve Gilbert left Rob Nelson in two minds when fielding the ball. His decision to go for first left Blair Sharleville to score. Sharleville added to the Cambridge tally in the 7th, his infield single scoring Luke Martino.

In the bottom of the seventh, Ian Lanario restored Enfield's eight run lead, his rightfield double scoring Steve Simmons. Ian Lanario then pitched the final two innings, brother Rob having caught throughout.

Cambridge seemed to lack spirit, and with Espinosa's early problems offering a lead to Spartans, the game lost spark early on. However there were some good natured moments, such as the umpires cheery rendition of 'Take Me Out To The Ball Game' at the start of inning seven. They were gently ribbed about the ethics of officials singing 'root root root for the home team !'

AS THE VILLAGE CLOCK STRUCK THREE

It happened in a farm field at Barrelston. When the boys were not running to escape the farmer's dogs they were running around the field inventing games. In one game they would hit a stone with a stick and run. Every game involved running because they were boys, and just couldn't stop running. Eventually they found it more exciting if there was a prescribed distance to run before the stone was retrieved, with a risk of being hit by the stone if they ran too slowly. Two cow dabs, a challenging distance apart, were adopted as markers. This game flourished in Barrelston, and soon an improvised ball replaced the stone, when the knocks received by the boys drew disapproval from the villagers. As Barrelston boys grew up they took the game with them all over Britain, and it underwent refinement until it became, as cricket, our national summer game. But meanwhile, at Barrelston, successive generations of boys developed the basic game further in the farm field. One boy of keen perception spotted four cow dabs forming the angles of a square, each side of which measured almost exactly the challenging distance that had been adopted in the two dab game. With typical imprecision of terminology the game that involved transition of a square became known as rounders. The two dab game had become so well established in Britain that rounders didn't catch on, except as an occasional amusement. But then, one day, a Barrelston boy took the four dab game to America, and the momentous outcome of that is vividly apparent. To see baseball in Britain today is like welcoming home an old friend who has made good on his travels abroad.
